CORRECTION.

In my article on the Consecutive Sentence in Greek, in the last number of this Journal, pp. 169, 170, for "Mr. Ridgeway" read "Mr. Whitelaw." My excuse must be the naïve excuse recently given by the Spectator for a similar blunder—that the writer was thinking more of the subject than of the author of the essay cited; to which may be added the extenuating fact that the passage was hastily incorporated while the article was going through the press, and that Mr. Ridgeway's name was at that moment uppermost in my mind.
